Summary of the activities for KGU students (関学生の活動) :

In Child Hope's head office

- By presentation of Ester and Christian, we studied about CHAP and Street children's situation

In Luneta Park

- Join a class with the street children
- 18:05~ so-ran bushi
- Showing Japanese pictures
- Have children draw their dreams
- Give a medal made from origami, and a mushroom
- Play with children

Self-evaluation and Lesson learned (今回の活動において学んだこと、自己評価、反省すべき点、改善点、提案など)

We learned to always care and look into the eyes of the children.

We also learned that being able to speak the language is an important thing. We couldn't communicate with some children when they couldn't speak English.

When dancing So-ran bushi, we weren't able to teach how to say "So-ran" and "Dokkoisho sho".

Some people lacked of skin ship.

For next year, bringing more things such as crayons and colored pencils would be a good idea.

The ribbon was falling off of the medals.

Writing names on the medals was a great idea. Kids looked happy. However some people were doing that and some were not.

Summary of discussion with NGO (代表者、現地スタッフとのディスカッション内容) :

NO DISUCUSION.

About the Street Children

Street children are young people who spend a considerable time living and/or working on the streets of the world's cities. Different countries describe street children in different ways. However, three general categories have been frequently used to describe them:

- children working in the street, living their own house (not street)
- children living and working in the street
- children working on the streets who maintain regular contact with their families

Reality Situation of Street Children in Asia

- The working street child works from 6 to 16 hours, often in a combination of "occupations".
- Street children usually come from large families, with six to ten children per family.
- Street children are generally malnourished and anemic, many of them physically stunted.
- Street children suffer psychologically from undue family pressures, abuses and neglect at home. Very often, they develop low self-esteem.
- Street children are prone to street fights and bullying from bigger youth, harassment from policemen, suspicion and arrest for petty crimes, abuse and torture from misguided authorities.
- Street children usually come from broken families.
- There are more boys than girls. Female children are disadvantaged because of their sex; they do more housework and are prone to sexual abuses.

- Parents of street children are preoccupied with earning a living, oftentimes engaged in irregular low-paying jobs as construction workers, vendors, and scavengers.
